WILLING VICTIMS WE.

We pointed out yesterday how Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, had incautiously let out the fact that the silver States were only seeking protection for their product. The subject is worth pursuing still fur-

When our silver demonetizing act was passed, in 1873, all the senators from the silver States voted for it. The act gave them the trade dollar, which they wanted for their commerce with China and Japan, and this fact commended it to them. Their mines had not then begun to make large yields of silver and they cared nothing therefore for the fact that the regular dollar was dropped by the act from our coinage. Not only so, but this same Senator Stewart, of Nevada, who now vexes the public ear with such ceaseless clamor for free coinage of cheap silver dollars, said then in the debates on the bill, "I want the standard gold." "Gold is the universal standard of the world. Everybody knows what a dollar in gold

Mr. Stewart, in making these declarations, fairly and truly represented the people of the Pecific States, because, from the beginning of the war up to this very four gold has been their standard of value and medium of exchange and they have all along refused and still do refuse to take anything but gold in payment of debts due to them. They preach silver to transactions In the speech which he delivered in the Senate on the repeal bill, Senator Sherman exibited several Pacific coast publications. One was the Virginia Chronicle, published in Nevada, for August 13, 1893. It contained nearly half a page of advertisements of various mining companies calling for assessments "payable in United States gom coin." Every one of them has the stipulation "payable in United States gold coin." «

This is the way they raise money to mine the silver they are trying to force on us as money. They refuse to use it themselves, and call for gold in organizing the companies, which are to mine silver to be sold to us to destroy all our business and trade.

Another document shown by him was the San Francisco News Circular. The whole of one page of it contained assessment notices of silver mining companies, and every one of them required the assessment to be paid in gold coin.

The case is one of the plainest that ever existed, of a set of men deliberately setting themselves about the business of pulling the wool over the eyes of another set of men, and the second set standing like sheep, and permitting the operation to take place.

OBJECT LESSONS.

When we say "History repeats itself," it is no more than saying like causes always produce like effects. The history of the world abounds with proof that whenever a government tampers with its money it brings incalculable disaster upon all the people of the country. There has been case after case where this has been proved-there is no single case in which disaster failed to follow. Our people cught to have been warned by the previous lessons the world has furnished what would happen to us in our mad attempt to make fifty cents do the work of a dollar, but surely what they now see before their eyes should teach them where philosophy falled.

In the month of August the earnings of the Chicago and Milwaukee railroad fell off $600,000. The C. B. & Q. railroad | paper money, and we say very candidly clation of the limitations of the space fell off $650,000. The Pennsylvania Central fell off over $600,000, on lines east of Pittsburg, and it took off one hundred passenger trains on September 1st. The Louisville and Nashville railroad fell off in earnings during August $15,000 a day. This is the experience of all the rallroads.

The bank clearances for the week ending August 12, 1893, were $789,490,005 against $390,972,905 for the corresponding week of 1892. For the week ending August 19th they were $763,265,755 against $1,015,559,633 for the corresponding week of last year. For the week erding August 26th they were $652,931,203 against $978,310,276 for the corresponding week of last year. For the week ending September 2d they were $396,915,203 against $1,125,785,523 for the corresponding week of last year. For the week ending September 16, 1893, they were $767,882,123 against $176,526,539 for the corcorresponding week of last year. For the week ending September 23d they were $776,854,656 against $1,115,%4,012 for the yorresponding week of last year. For the week ending September 30th they were $780,274,878 against $1,095,203,357.

An immense falling off in the business of the country is denoted here. The business of the country is drying up and consuming with dry rot, yet our deluded representatives allow the owners of silver mines to continue pushing them along the road to destruction, that they may sell their silver at double what it is

SENATOR DANIES IN THE CAMPAIGN

The Petersburg Index-Appeal, in a recent article, raised the question whether it would be wise for the Democratic managers to invoke the services of Senator Daniel in the present campaign in view of his opinions regarding silver. The Lynchburg News takes the subject up and argues very earnestly that the masses in Virginia are thoroughly with Major Daniel in his views on silver, and that he is therefore more competent to recall wayward Democrats about to stray off to the Populists than any other man. For our own part we think the question is one that concerns Major Daniel personally much more than it concerns the Democratic party. Major Daniel is a true and genuine Virginian, and he is not going to say anything anywhere that can encourage Virginians to leave the associations of their white brothers and take up with a mongrel party that adopts for its principles wild and revolutionary and socialistic theories, which no Democrat could tolerate. So that from the party's standpoint there is nothing worth considering to be urged why Major Daniel should not be invited to speak wherever he can make it convenient to go.

But we don't see very clearly how Daniel the man is going to get along when he takes up the money side of the Populists' platform. The main contention now, of the Populist party, is their proposition concerning money. The party begins and ends at that point. Strike out the money question and there is no Populist party. Their clamor is for more money, for an abundance of money, for cceans of money. All their various schemes were devices to get out more money. They say the government shall issue unlimited quantities of its own promises to pay, to be legal tender for debt, and that as merely a part of the scheme for putting out as much money as all the atmosphere can hold, it shall coin up all filver into coins worth fifty cents each, but called by the law dollars and endowed by the law with power to pay dollars of debt.

Now, Major Daniel agrees with the Popuilsts in their proposition so far as silver is concerned. He, too, demands that the government shall the silver that is brought to the mint into 371 1-4 grain legal tender dollars, though they are only worth fifty-five cents each. But how he can stop short of their other demand (respecting paper issues) is more than we can understand. A silver dollar worth only fifty cents must fall in currency to the level of fifty cents unless the government always treats it as a gold dollar in all its transactions. It is in effect, then, a demand obligation payable in gold, and the government must always stand ready to redeem each one in gold or if it will at once fall to its true and intrinsic value.

This is exactly what the paper promises are which the Populists call on the government to issue. They must be demand obligations, payable in gold, and they must be paid in gold whenever it is called for, or they must immediate us, but they demand gold in their own by fall to the level of irredeemable paper currency which necessarily goes down, down, down, until it reaches the vanishing point, as happened to the assignats of the French Revolution, the continental money of our revolution, and the Confederate currency, and as wou'd surely have happened to the United States Treasury notes if the government had failed in the war. When success seemed doubtful they had actually falien to a point that enabled one gold dollar to purchase three dollars of them.

The trouble, therefore, is not with the Democratic party, the trouble is with Major Daniel. We do not see how he can ask those whom he addresses to go with him for coining fifty cent legal tender silver dollars, and halt when they ask him to go with them for flooding the country with the government's promises to pay. If either is money it is by virtue of the government's flat ordaining and declaring it to be money, and we see no reason for the government "flating" fifty cents worth of silver into a dollar, and refusing to do the same thing with a piece of paper. We think the Populists have far the best of the case. One of the most per-emptory obligations of life is that if we do a thing we shall do it well. If we are going into the business of issuing flat money, on every principle we should issue all of that fiat money that can be used, and we should make it of the cheapest material that can be had. Paper is, so far, a good deal money should be made of paper rather than silver. Major Daviel says he will turn fifty cents into a dollar, the Populist says he will turn five cents into a dollar. Between the two we say the Populist doctrine will win every time. They out-Herod Herod! These remarks have already received emphasis and point in what took place when Major Daniel spoke on Monday at Charlottesville. The questions that were put to nim showed that he has an uphill road to travel when he calls for free colnage of silver, but halts at the demand for flat cheaper than silver, and every consideration demands, therefore, that the flat without being for the other. The trouble with Major Daniel as well as with the Populists is that both have strayed away from the good old Democratic doctrine of sound money, and one is now as deep in the mud as the other is in the mire.

The Castle Garden Aquarium

It is expected that by the time the snow falls the conversion of Castle Garden into an aquarium will have been accomplished, and thereafter the roof that rang with Jenny Lind's voice, and shook with the bloming of the gurs that welcomed Lafayette as he walked up the carpeted way into the old fortress, will hear no sound more interesting than the grunt of the sea-lion or the admiring exclamations of the seaof the sea-lion or the ; tions of rural visitors.

The task of remodelling the old fortress for use as an aquarium was intrusted by the Board of Public Parks to Mr. T. Woodman, a specialist in such lin of work, and to J. F. Munckwitz, Jr., the architect. They have found the appropriation of $150,000 made by the Legislature for the purpose none too large but the money has been satisfactorily spent, for it has transformed the dilapida ted structure into an aquarium that will surpass all others in the world in size attractiveness, and in the superior excellence of the marine menageric to be exhibited there. at command have been shown in provid-ing suitable accommodations for the various members of the marine colony. Around the big central pool, in which the whale will have a dolphin or two for company, and partly depressed like it in the floor, are grouped six smaller pools, elliptical in form and about six-teen feet by the smaller which will pools, empirical in form and street his teen feet by twelve in size, which will be tenanted by seals, sharks, porpoises, sword-fish, alligators, and turtles. Each of these pools will be lined with white tiles and covered with white sand on the bottom to aid the eye of the specta-tor, while the rays from the skylights in the roof will be so conveyed on pools as to make even minute objects in them visible from the gallery. The thirty-six tanks in which the smaller fish are to be housed have been built in unbroken line along the circular walls of the old fortress. Each of these tanks is four by eight by ten feet in dimen-sions, and they look now in their incomplete state like rude stalls of unadorned brick; but when the finishing touches have been put on them they will be a sight to please the most critical eye. Each tank, lined with white tiles, faced with plate-glass, and filled with moving fish, will be incased with an ornamental iron frame, so that to the visitor entering the aquarium its walls will appear at first view to be hung with a fine display of marine paintings. In effecting this result the designers have accomplished a unique artistic triumph. Some of the tanks will contain fresh-water fish, for which which carefully filtered Croton will be provided, and with them Mr. Woodman expects to make profitable experiments in pisciculture. But perhaps the most interesting experiment he is likely to undertake will be that of restoring eight to bilind fish, of which several varities, procured in caverns and subterranean streams, are to be exhibited in one of the tanks along the gallery above the main floor. In these gallery tanks, of which there will be about eighty, the "small deer" of the marine king clams, oysters, and mollusks of all kinds, crustaceans, corals, etc.—will be seen in extensive display .- Harper's Weekly.

OUR HANDWRITING.

A Revolution in Fashiorab's Chiro-

graphy. The change in handwriting in the last few years has been most remarkable. There are those who read one's character in one's chirogrophy, and who claim that great things may be learned by the study of handwriting; but, whether or not this is so, every one must notice that in the last few years there has been a complete revolution in fashionable chirography. Young girls of to-day write in large and usually firm characters, while a surpris-ing number of young men, not trained to clerkliness, and struggling between several recognized standards of a good masculine handwriting, produce letters of a singularly childish style of penmanship, and generally very small. The Boston Transcript says that literary men, by which it means all those who dabble in literature or journalism, regularly write with a very small hand, and it adds that occupations this adaptation of individuality to what may be called cla proclivities in handwriting is often equal-ly striking. Now that the typewriting machine has clicked itself so throughly into the domain of letters, perhaps styles of chirogaphy will decline more and more in importance; and, just as we have learned to read character in handwriting, the soulless print of the machine will shield the innermost thoughts of our cor espondents with as much safety as ever efoe. It is evident that the machine has more than one advantage.-Rochester Post

FOSTER'S COPYRIGHTS

The One Protecting "Suwance Ribber Has But Recently Expired.

It is surprising bit of information to most, no doubt, that the copyright on "S'wanee Ribber," or "Old Folks at Home," has only expired within a few days. Its author, Stephen C. Foster, was in Pittsburg in 1851, and one atter-noon entered the office of his brother and asked the name of a southern river to put in a completed song. Morrison suggested Yazoo, Pedee and several others they then had recourse to an atias, and the first river that caught their eye was the Suwanee. The Suwanee river takes its rise in the Okennokee swamp and flows through Florida into the guif. the song was first sung in public Christy's minstrels, and in 1851 was copy-righted by a New York firm which made fortune out of it, and at the expiration Foster Welch secured a composer's copyright for fourteen years, and it was this period that expired so recently Foster was only 27 years old when he died in New York, but he had already died in New York, but he had aiready composed, among 125 others, "My Old Kentucky Home," Massa's in the Cold. Cold Ground," "Old Dog Tray," "Way Down South," "Nellie Was a Lady, "Willie, We Have Missed You," "Old Black Joe" and "Come where My Love Lies Dreaming,"—New York Recorder.

THE TIMES DAILY FASHION HINTS. We Are Not All to Clothe Ourselves in Sackcloth.

MORE POINTS AND PUFFS.

That rough serge and hopsacking is all very well for street and style, but we cannot abide it as a constancy, and we are therefore greeted this seas in with a larger assortment of sliks than ever before. The craze for silk shows itself in the attempt to beautify woolen goods by silk dots and stripes and wavy lines.

Silk ruffles and bands and sleeves are not enough to satisfy this insatiable crav-ing for soft, shiny, dainty stuff. We must have whole dresses and linings; yes, yards and yards of it. No wonder that France is the paradise of silk industry, for there the tasteful, beauty loving women give it most encouragement. But American we men of fashion are not slow to appreciate a good article when they see it, and they joyfully welcome the importation of ship loads of the loveliest fabric in the world. Even men show a decided weakness for it in the shape of neglige coats, shirts and ties.

The softer, thinner sliks will, of course, have to wait over till next summer to give the heavy, substantial kind a show And will they merit the notice they receive? There is no putting forth the that silks are not warm enough for win-ter when those heavy corded bengalines are to be had in such large numbers. Who was it that said: "See Rome and die"? That's rather a strong statement to make about silks, but when you have seen those silks you would rather die than be without one. These bengalines are changeable like the rest of the goods. The cord is of one color and the satin sheen beneath an entirely different shade. There is old rose with green cord, solferino and brown, purple and green, and the pale shades of blue and green.

The moires give us some of the good old stand-by colors again-just simple reds and blues and greens, without borrowing names from any of the ancient Queens or modern actresses. Here is an exquisite visiting costume of brocade-rose and robins' egg blue or black. The skirt is adorned with a ruche of rose and blue ribbon running to points in front and reaching to the fullness in the back. The blouse bodice trimmed to correspond with the skirt is confined at the waist by a pink belt. The collar is covered with black feathers.
